Dementia Care and Residential Care Homes

Tweed Nuttall Warburton has a long history of designing for high dependency needs in the social and residential elderly care sectors. Over the past thirty-years, we have gained specialist knowledge of the requirements and considerations needed when designing for the elderly.

Following the delivery of Lincoln House Dementia Care Unit in 2011 and more recently the large £7m expansion to the Trepassey Residential Care Home, with its specialist dementia care wings, TNW are well practised at designing for those with dementia. This requires both a high-level appraisal and detail-orientated focus to consider the wide spectrum of requirements. These include the careful arrangement of spaces, colour, finishes and furnishings to ensuring the comfort, familiarity and safety of all the residents.

Trepassey Residential Care Home, formerly a large 19th century private house, is in an attractive location overlooking the Dee Estuary and Welsh Hills. The home, open since 1957 provides care for residents with a current age range from 80 to 102+. With the average age at just over 90 years, there are inevitably a number of residents who have developed some level of dementia.

In 2016 work began on the largest expansion and refurbishment in the home's history. The steeply sloping nature of the site has been the single most important factor which has enabled the design: with the additional accommodation and specialist dementia care wings being tucked into the slope of the site below the main house. This enabled the creation of a series of garden terraces allowing for level access from the home to gardens and maintaining great views from the bedrooms.

achieved through new extensions and remodelling existing internal spaces.

The home has remained operational during the entire two-phase construction period meaning the project has required complex logistical and phasing planning to allow the home to operate through the 3-year build with minimal disruption to residents.

The interior design principles tailored for the elderly included uncomplicated spaces, transparency, easily identifiable rooms, excellent lighting and a simple layout. The respite dementia care bedrooms included natural roof lighting, three projecting seating bays along its length with side views to the outside and a change in wall colour at each end to facilitate transition and turning points.
